STOCKPORT,

WITH THE TOWNSHIPS OF HEATON NORRIS, BRINNINGTON-WITH-POETWOOD, BREDBURY, OFFERTON, CHEADLE BULKELEY, CHEADLE MOSELEY (WITH CHEADLE HULME AND ADS-WOOD), AND THE VILLAGES AND HAMLETS OF WOODLEY, HATHERLOW, BUTTERHOUSE GREEN, EDGELEY, AND BRINKSWAY.

STOCKPORT is a market town, township, and borough, both corporate and parliamentary, and a parish: the latter very populous; situate in the hundred of Macclesfield, county of Chester, 183 miles n.w. by n. from London, 5½ s.e. from Manchester, 46½ n.e. by E. from Chester (by Crewe), 11½ n. from Macclesfield, and 79½ n. by w. from Birmingham—these distances are by rail. From London, by road it is 179 miles, from Ashton-under-Lyne 7, and from Buxton 17. Much controversy has arisen among etymologists and antiquarians upon the derivation of the name of the town, the spelling of which is at variance with all the old authorities. In a deed, three centuries ago, it was written Stopford; in the civil wars, when occupied by the parliamentary forces from Manchester, it was spelled Stopworth and in the twelfth century it was written Stopport—the last, most probably, a corruption from Stoke port. Certain it is, that in the survey the place is not mentioned, but its great antiquity is undoubted, and it was made the grand centre of many diverging Roman roads. The country in the vicinity of the town is pleasant and picturesque, the prospect from some points is bold, and on all sides is rich in wood and water. The Tame and Goyte glide through the valley at the east end of the town, to their confluence below Portwood Bridge, where, upon their junction, the stream takes the name of the Mersey. The town of Stockport is irregularly built upon ground in some parts precipitous, with an ascent from the north. Great improvements have been effected in the town and the approaches to it within the last half century; amongst these the Wellington road stands most conspicuous. This fine thoroughfare was effected by the commissioners of the Manchester and Buxton turnpike road, and extends from Heaton Chapel to Rowcroft Smithy; it avoids the narrow and sudden turnings and precipitous ascents and declivities of the town, and crosses the Mersey without descending from the high grounds on either side, to the level of the vale of that river. This was affected by the construction of a noble bridge of eleven arches across the valley and the river, of which nine are on the Cheshire and two on the Lancashire side of the Mersey; the arch over the river has a span of more than ninety feet, and an elevation forty feet above the water; it is built of hard white stone from the quarries of Saddleworth and Runcorn. The Improvement Act was obtained in 1824, and the road and bridge were completed in less than two years, the former being opened on 3rd July, 1826. The toll-house on Wellington Bridge was closed in 1860. Vernon Bridge, forming a direct communication between the interior of the town and Heaton Norris, was built by subscription in 1828-9. The original structure has since been taken down, and a more substantial bridge erected by the Corporation. Another bridge was erected in 1857, which affords a direct communication between the centre of the town and Portwood. It is built of stone, at a cost of £2,252, and is called the Victoria Bridge. Higher up the stream, a fine stone erection, called the Mersey Bridge, was commenced in the same year, so as to connect Heaton Norris with Chestergate, Edgeley, and the higher levels of the more southern portions of the borough. The cost of this bridge was £9,385. Beyond this is another stone bridge of greater antiquity, called Brinksway Bridge, connecting Heaton Mersey and Heaton Norris with Brinksway, Cheadle Bulkeley, and the western part of the Borough. In 1850 a site was presented to the Corporation by Lord Vernon, the lord of the manor, for public parks, situated at the south-east end of the town, and formerly known as Stringer's Fields. On the 20th September, 1858, the Vernon Park (as it is now called) was formally dedicated to the use and recreation of the people, and publicly opened, the previously rude and uncultivated site having been tastefully laid out and planted at the expense of the Corporation. It is admirably situated, and commands a picturesque amphitheatrical view of the magnificent woodland scenery for miles around, backed by the Yorkshire and Derbyshire hills. Its seven terraces, approached by zig-zag flights of steps, are greatly admired. They overlook the splendid waterfall called Stringer's Weir, on the river Goyte, and the rich scenery of Woodbank. The park is adorned with fountains, a greenhouse, and other conveniences, presented by the public, and a handsome building for a museum, erected by the then borough members (Messrs. Kershaw and Smith) in 1860. In 1873 a tract of land called Crowther's Fields, situated between Marchester road and Wellington road North, Heaton Norris, was purchased by the Corporation, assisted by private subscriptions, to be used as a recreation and play ground, for which purpose it is admirably adapted, being elevated and healthy. The original manufacture of this town was silk, the first mills in England for winding and throwing silk upon the Italian principle being established here; but cotton spinning and manufacturing are now the staple trades of the town and neighbourhood, and Stockport ranks amongst the principal seats of this important and influential branch. The works of Messrs. Hanson, Scott & Co. Stockport Ropery, form an important feature in this town. They are situated in the New Zealand road, where they carry on the business of rope, twine, and cotton band makers. They have also erected a hemp and flax spinning mill adjacent to the ropery. For calico printing, bleaching and dyeing, there are extensive works in the town and its vicinity; also large corn mills, iron foundries, machine shops, breweries, and tobacco manufactories. The manufacture of hats is a branch that has long been established here, and continues to increase. The conveyance of merchandise and passengers to all parts of the kingdom is facilitated by the London and North-Western Railway, which passes through the town parallel with the Wellington road. This line is carried over the Mersey and the valley by a stupendous viaduct, which ranks amongst the most surprising of railway wonders. The extreme length of the viaduct is 1,876 feet; it has 22 semi-circular arches, each of 63 feet span, four of 20 feet span, and two at each abutment. The height of the viaduct (to the surface of the rails) is 111 feet above the bed of the river, being six feet higher than the celebrated Menai Bridge. The foundation stone of the viaduct was laid on the 10th of March, 1839, so that the time occupied in erecting and completing this immense structure was only a year and nine months. The quantity of stone used in the erection was 400,000 cubic feet, and the number of bricks about 11,000,000. The cost was nearly £70,000. There are branches from Stockport to Yorkshire by the Ashton branch line, and to Derbyshire by the Disley and Whaley Bridge branch railway. A line of railway from Stockport to Timperley was opened in December, 1865, and gives great advantages to Stockport and the surrounding districts in the direct communication it affords with Liverpool. The proprietary was formed jointly by the Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire, the Great Northern, and the Midland Railway Companies. The station at Tiviot Dale is a handsome and commodious structure, in the Elizabethan style of architecture, erected at a cost of about £10,000. Messrs. Mangnall and Littlewoods of Manchester, were the architects. There are also three picturesque Gothic roadside stations on the same line of railway, namely, at Cheadle, Bagley and Northenden, all from designs by the same architects. The company have also erected an extensive goods warehouse at Wellington road for the convenience of Stockport. The Midland Railway Company have also direct communication with Manchester by their new line from Tiviot Dale through Reddish and Belle Vue.

The Canal to Manchester, in uniting with the Duke of Bridgewater's navigation at that town, effects a means of water communication with the principle navigable rivers and canals in England, and affords additional conveyance for the transmission of the industrial products of this busy town. There is also tram car communication between Manchester and Stockport every half-hour, and on Saturday and Sunday every fifteen minutes.

Stockport was incorporated at an early date, but the office of mayor was merely nominal, until the passing of the Municipal Corporation Act in 1835, under which the borough is now governed. The corporate body consists of a mayor, fourteen aldermen, and forty-two councillors, incorporated by the style of the "Mayor, Aldermen and Burgessess of the Borough of Stockport." The extensive gas works are now the property of the Corporation, and afford a handsome annual income. In addition to the works in Millgate (the original establishment), and the reserve cylinders and gasometer in Lord street, there is an immense telescope gasholder at the Heaton Norris Gas Works, the diameter of which is 96 feet outside case, 94 feet inside, and 32½ feet deep; therefore, with two 32½ feet lifts it rises nearly 64 feet, and is capable of storing 446,000 cubic feet of gas, without calculating the rise of the top. Besides this institution there are water works, belonging to a company of proprietors, which afford great advantages to all classes of the inhabitants at a cheap rate. The reservoirs are situated at Lyme Park, and the water is derived from the hill drainage of that mountainous district. The borough is divided by the above-named Act into six wards, and provided with a commission of the peace, under which the borough justices hold their sittings in the Court House, Vernon street, on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday; and the magistrates for the county hold petty sessions every alternate Thursday in the same building. The borough lockups are in the lower storey of the Court House, and the cells for county prisoners are at the county police station, Mill lane, Warren street. A County Court for adjudicating claims to any amount not exceeding £50 sits every alternate Friday at the Court House, Vernon street. The borough has a fire brigade, the station house being in Warren street, underneath the borough court, and adjoining the police court. There are also the volunteer fire brigade, whose station is at Rigby's yard, Lower Hillgate, and the West of England fire brigade, Hulme's stables, Bridgefield. The Reform Bill of 1832 conferred upon Stockport the elective franchise, and the borough sends two members to Parliament. The present representatives are Charles Henry Hopwood, Esq. Q.C. and Frederick Pennington, Esq. The mayor is the returning officer. Stockport is a polling station at the election of members to represent North Cheshire.

The parish church of St. Mary the Virgin is built upon the site of the old church taken down in 1813. The first stone of the new edifice was laid by Wilbraham Egerton, Esq., July 5th, 1813, and the building was completed early in 1817, at an expense of £30,000. It is a noble pile, built of Runcorn stone, in the florid Gothic style of architecture, and occupies a commanding and elevated situation at the east side of the market place. It consists of a nave, chancel, side aisles, and a lofty square embattled tower, surmounted by pinnacles, with a fine peal of eight bells, opened in 1817, the former set of six bells being removed to Marple church. The living is a rectory, and is in the patronage of the lord of the manor. The erection of St. Thomas's church, Higher Hillgate, commenced in September, 1822, and was finished in 1825, at an expense of £14,555, defrayed by the Church Commissioners; it is a handsome structure in the Grecian style of architecture, with a tower surmounted by a cupola. During 1863 it was thoroughly re-painted and beautified by public subscription. St. Peter's church, a neat brick building, situate in St. Peter's square, was erected in 1765-8, at the sole expense of William Wright, Esq., who munificently endowed it with £200 per annum. St. Matthew's church, Edgeley, erected to supersede the temporary ecclesiastical chapel at Brinksway banks, is a large and convenient stone structure, with a handsome and lofty spire. St. Paul's church, Portwood, is an elegant stone building, with a chaste and lofty spire, and is situated in a densely-populated district, at the north-east extremity of the town. The Roman Catholics have three churches, with school attached. Mount Tabor Chapel, belonging to the Methodist New Connexion, is situated in the Wellington road South, and is in the classic style of architecture. The building is of brick, with stone dressings; the whole front, however, being faced with Darley Dale stone. A well-proportioned Corinthian portico of four columns, approached by a noble flight of steps, extending the whole width of the building, forms the chief feature of the design. The accommodation is for about 900 persons. The Congregational church, Wellington road South, is a handsome Gothic structure, built of parpoints, with Hollington stone dressing. It comprises nave, two aisles, transept, chancel, chapter-house, and vestry. The chief feature is a tower and spire, about 150 feet high. It will seat about 600 people. The cost was a little over £6,000. There are also other chapels for various religious denominations, a list of which is appended to the Directory. To many of the places of worship are attached Sunday schools, and there are other public educational institutions and several excellent schools, all of which are given under their proper head. The great National day and Sunday school, in Wellington road, on the Cheshire side of the river, is deserving of more particular notice, as a noble institution and ornamental structure. It was completed in 1826, and imparts education to an unlimited number of children of either sex, belonging to the Established Church. In 1863 an infant school, a separate and chaste building, was added. There is another large school, called the Stockport Sunday school, for the education of children of all denominations, the lecture room of which is said to be the largest in the kingdom, and the building will accommodate 5,000 children, about 4,000 being in attendance on Sundays. It has also branch schools at Heaviley, Lancashire hill, Heaton Mersey, and Brinksway, all on the outskirts of the borough.

The Infirmary, a handsome stone-fronted building, is situated nearly opposite to the National school, Wellington road South, and is a most beneficial establishment. It is supported by public subscription and private benefaction, is governed by a committee appointed annually, and conducted by a voluntary medical staff. In Wellington street, off Wellington road, is a handsome brick structure, called the Oddfellows' Hall, or Widows' and Orphans' Institute. It was erected in 1841, and contains numerous good rooms and an elegant hall. The latter is much used for exhibitions, public meetings, &c. It was originally designated the Lyceum, but lost that title in passing into the hands of the Independent Order of Oddfellows. There is a circulating library in connection with the Hall. A Mechanics' Institution, built of brick and stone, and ably designed, was opened in September, 1862, at a cost of nearly £4,000; it is situated in Wellington road South, and in addition to its extensive and well selected library and commodious reading rooms, there is a large assembly hall, well adapted for concerts, balls, &c. In the same year a Volunteer Armoury, belonging to the Stockport corps, was opened in Greek street. It is a beautiful building, in the Gothic style of architecture, with tower and large drill room, and cost about £5,200. The Union Workhouse, situated at Shaw Heath, is a noble and commodious building, capable of accommodating 1,000 inmates. The union comprises seventeen townships, the representatives of which assemble every Monday for the despatch of business, in the board-room at the workhouse; it cost £12,000.

The Grammar and Free School, in Wellington road, a short distance south of the Infirmary, was founded in 1482, by Sir Edmund Shaw, of London, and was governed by the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths. In 1860, after much commotion, the charity was transferred to the Corporation of Stockport, and is now governed by trustees appointed by that body. On the opposite side of Wellington road to the Grammar School, is a neat brick structure, for the children of dissenters, used as a public day school, called the British school, in which a considerable number are educated. Six almhouses, founded by Sir John Warren, in 1865; an apprenticeship fund, raised by Mr. Wright; several good news rooms, a ragged and industrial school, a town mission, and an auxiliary Bible Society are among the institutions sustained in this town. Several newspapers are published here. The market place is commodious, but its site, being the summit of a lofty hill, is somewhat difficult of access by carts, &c. This objection, has, however, to a great extent been overcome by the erection of the St. Peter's Bridge, spanning the street called Little Underbank, and connecting St. Peter's gate with the Market place on the level; the centre is formed of ornamental cast-iron girders, while the extensions at either end are carried over arches built of brick, with stone facings. The extreme length of the bridge is 210 feet, and its width 34 feet 6 inches, with parapets 6 feet 6 inches in height; the centre or connecting arch is at an elevation of over 30 feet from the roadway of the street which it crosses. The descent from either end into Underbank is by 34 steps. It was erected at a cost of about £8,000; J. Brierley, Esq. c.e. of Blackburn, being the designer. The market is held on Friday and Saturday, when large quantities of agricultural produce, &c. are disposed of. In 1851 the corner stone of a market hall was laid by the Mayor. It has a Gothic stone front, with a range of cast-iron balustrading, extending the whole breadth. The whole is very ornamental, and is a commanding feature of the market place. In 1860 the entire area of the market place was covered in with a roof of iron and glass, supported by strong iron pillars. Fairs are held on the 1st of January, 4th and 25th of March, 1st of May, 8th of July, and 23rd of October.

HEATON NORRIS (Lancashire) was a township and chapelry, in the parish of Manchester, but is now divided into two rectories. It is separated from Stockport by the river Mersey, but so intimately connected with that town in trade, manufactures, &c. that it practically forms a part of it, though only a portion of it is within the parliamentary borough. The entire township contains 2,108 acres. The London and North-Western Railway Company have a large passenger station, and still larger goods station in the township, where an immense amount of business is transacted in both departments of traffic, as well as from the south of Stockport station, which is only divided from it by the viaduct. The Great Northern, Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire, and Midland joint railways have also a handsome and commodious passenger station in Tiviot Dale, and goods station in Wellington road North. Heaton chapel, a plain brick building, was erected by the subscriptions of a few individuals, the most forward of whom were the Howard family. For many years previous to 1846, this was the only place of worship connected with the Established Church within the township. Christ church, a modern and handsome stone structure, stands in a conspicuous situation, on the north-east side of Wellington road; it is surmounted by a well-proportioned spire, which is furnished with an illuminated clock, having three dials. The Sunday and day schools connected with the church, and standing in its rear, are built of stone, with a neat balcony, beyond this structure stands a handsome brick-built parsonage house, the whole having been erected through the liberality of the congregation. Amongst other architectural features of the township may be mentioned Wycliffe chapel and school, Wellington road North, an elegant stone building, erected by the Independents; Tiviot Dale Wesleyan chapel, a brick building, with stone front, erected in 1824; and Hanover chapel (Presbyterian), Lancashire hill. The Roman Catholics have also a small chapel. Bleaching, cotton spinning, engineering, and machine making, and the manufacture of earthenware and bricks are carried on in the township.

BADFREY is a township and ecclesiastical district and village, in the parish and union of Stockport and county of Chester, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.E. by N. from that town, and includes the hamlets of BARRACK HILL, CASTLE HILL, HATHERLOW, BUTTERHORSE GREEN and WOODLEY; the two latter are united, and comprise what may be termed the village. The church of St. Mark, at Butterhouse Green, is a handsome building, in the early English style of architecture, with tower, surmounted by pinnacles; there is also a National school in connection, and one on the British system at Woodley; also a chapel for Primitive Methodists. Cotton spinning and manufacturing and the manufacture of hats form the principal trades carried on in the township.

HATHERLOW is a small village or hamlet in the above township, about one mile from Butterhouse Green, three miles E. by N. from Stockport, and about the same distance N. from Marple. There is a neat Independent chapel, and a Sunday school in connection with the same.

OFFERTON is a small rural township of 730 acres, in the parish and union of Stockport, two miles S.E. from that town, and the same distance from Marple.

CHEADLE BULKELEY and CHEADLE MOSELEY (with CHEADLE HULME and ADSWOOD) are two townships in the parish of Cheadle, union of Stockport and county of Chester, including the hamlets of EDGELEY and BANKSWAY. These hamlets are in the borough of Stockport, and are parts of Cheadle Bulkeley and Cheadle Moseley, containing several cotton spinning and manufacturing establishments, and the extensive bleach works of Messrs. Sykes & Co. There is a neat stone church at Edgeley, dedicated to St. Matthew, previously mentioned in the notice of Stockport. The greater part of the inhabitants find employment in the mills, the remainder being occupied in agricultural pursuits. Acreage of Cheadle Bulkeley, 1,842; Cheadle Moseley acreage, 2,652.

TARPORLEY WITH BUNBURY,

WITH THE TOWNSHIPS AND VILLAGES OF ALPRAHAM, BEESTON, BURWARDSLEY, CALVELEY, EATON, HAUGHTON, HUXLEY, PECKFORTON, RIDLEY, RUSHTON, SPURSTOW, TILSTONE-FEARNALL, TIVERTON, WARDLE, WETTENHALL, AND THE PARISH OF TATTENHALL.

TARPORLEY is a parish, in the first division of the hundred of Eddisbury, comprising the townships of Eaton, Rushton and Utkinton, and the market town of Tarporley, the last-named 173 miles n.w. from London, 10 e. by s. from Chester, 12 w.s.w. from Middlewich, 33 s.w. from Manchester, and 14 from Whitechurch (Salop), situated two miles from the Beeston station on the line of the London and North-Western railway. The general appearance of the town is neat, and consists of a long well-paved street, at the south end of which is the ancient manor house, now the property of the dean and chapter of Chester cathedral. In 1281 the manor appears to have been the property of Hugh de Tarporley, who obtained the grant of a market and fair. In 1227, down to 1348, Tarporley had a mayor; but, at the latter period, the government of the town became, and is now, vested in two constables. The manorial rights are now possessed by the trustees of John Arden, Esq., Sir Philip de Malpas Grey Egerton, and the dean and chapter of Chester.

The parish church of Saint Helen, which was restored in 1870, is of considerable antiquity, built of red stone, and consists of a tower, chancel and aisles, the ends of the latter being enclosed as chancels; with several monuments deserving inspection. The living of Tarporley is a rectory, in the joint gift of the dean and chapter of Chester and the families of Alvanley and Egerton. There are places of worship for Baptists and Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists. The chief charities include almshouses for four poor widows, and Lady Jane Dane's charity school—this latter is now conducted upon the National plan, for the instruction of boys, girls and infants, under the superintendence of a committee representing the patrons and subscribers. In the town are a literary, &c. institute, erected in 1851, and a public hall capable of seating 400 persons, in which public meetings, concerts, &c., are held. The market hall is large, and the market is held on Thursday; fairs, May 1st, the first Monday after the 24th of August, and December 11th.

EATON, RUSHTON and UTKINTON are townships in the parish of Tarporley, and all are in close proximity to that township.

BUNBURY is a parish and village, the former approaching to within two miles of Tarporley, the latter is about three miles from that town. The Chester canal passes through the parish. The parish church of Saint Boniface, formerly a collegiate church, is a handsome building of red freestone, in the later style of English architecture, comprising a nave with lateral aisles, a chancel, and a square tower, surmounted with pinnacles. At the extremity of each aisle are the chapels of Egerton and Spurstow—the former containing a rich stone shrine, ornamented with grotesque figures, flowers, &c.; and on the south side of the chapel are two arches, with curious open work and scriptural paintings. Within the church are several fine monuments, including a rich altar tomb to the memory of Sir Hugh Calveley, the celebrated "Cheshire Hero," and another to Admiral Sir George Beeston. The church was completely restored in 1864, to which were added a new roof and clerestory windows, the expense being defrayed by subscription. The living of Bunbury is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the master and wardens of the Haberdashers' Company, London. The old college, supposed to have been the residence of the priests, still retains those characteristics which are common to mansions built in the middle ages. It stands near the north-west part of the town. In 1575, Thomas Aldersey, citizen and haberdasher of London, founded and endowed a free grammar school at Bunbury; and in 1812 the school-house was rebuilt by Samuel Aldersey, Esq., at a short distance from the church, and is now conducted as a National school.

The following places are all townships in Bunbury parish.

ALPRAHAM, 3 miles s.e. from Tarporley. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel. Lord Tollemache is the manorial lord.

BEESTON, 2½ miles from Tarporley, 2 from Bunbury, and 10 from Chester. The London and North-Western Railway Company have a station here. The old castle, which is about a mile from the station, stands on an isolated rock of great height, commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country. On a clear day the city of Chester, with the towers of its venerable cathedral, are conspicuous objects. It was erected by Ranulph Blundeville about the year 1220, after he had returned from Palestine, and was for centuries a stronghold of the Earls of Chester. During the parliamentary war it stood many rough sieges when in occupation of both Royalists and Parliamentarians, but after the taking of Chester by the latter it was dismantled. Lord Tollemache is the lord of the manor.

BURWARDSLEY is 4½ miles from Tarporley, and 4 from Bunbury. It is situated on what are called the Peckforton Hills. The chapel of ease is a small stone edifice, consecrated in 1735. The Primitive Methodists have also a chapel. Robert Barbour, Esq. is the lord of the manor.

CALVELEY is 5 miles n.e. from Nantwich. Calveley Hall is an ancient edifice, delightfully situated in a spacious and well-wooded park, and is the property of the Duke of Westmins er. Near the hall is a chapel of ease, built in 1837. A. B. Davenport, Esq. is the manorial lord. The London and North-Western Railway have a station here.

PECKFORTON is two miles s.w. from Bunbury, and 3½ s.s.w. from Tarporley. Peckforton Castle, the seat of the lord of

HAZEL GROVE,

WITH BOSDEN, BRAMHALL, NORBURY, TORKINGTON, POYNTON, WORTH, SIDDALL HOUSES, HIGH LANE, POWNALL GREEN, STOCKPORT MOOR AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HAZEL GROVE is a hamlet in the parish and union of Stockport, county of Chester, consisting of an irregularly disposed line of dwellings on either side of the main road leading from Stockport to Macclesfield, two miles south from the former, and ten north from the latter town. This place was called Bullock Smithy, until the year 1836, when its name was altered (or, as some say, revived) to its present more euphonious appellation. The inhabitants are employed in weaving silk for wholesale establishments in Macclesfield; many are engaged in the collieries and in hat manufacturing, and there are also two cotton factories which employ a number of hands. The London and North Western Railway Company have a branch line from Stockport and Disley, Whaley Bridge and Buxton, on which there is a station at Hazel Grove. The railway was opened to Whaley Bridge in 1857, and the additional distance of eight miles to Buxton in 1863. The places of worship are a chapel each for Independents, Wesleyan, Primitive, and Free Church Methodists. National and British schools are established in the village.

BRAMHALL is a township in the parish and union of Stockport, and three miles s.w. from that town. Bramhall Hall is a venerable mansion, composed chiefly of timber and plaster, pleasantly situated on the banks of a small rivulet; it is supposed to have been erected in the reign of Richard III.; at the south end is the domestic chapel, an ancient structure, and in it are the arms of several of the Cheshire gentry. The estate has recently been sold and divided into building plots, numerous villas and mansions having already been erected in the park and the neighbourhood. The Macclesfield branch of the London and North-Western Railway intersects the township, and has a station at Bramhall, four miles from Stockport. Acreage, 3,250. Bosdex is a township also in the parish and union of Stockport and forms the greater portion of Hazel Grove.

NORBURY is a chapelry and township in the parish and union of and about three miles s.s.e. from Stockport. In the township are the collieries belonging to Messrs. Clayton & Brooke. The inhabitants are for the most part engaged in agricultural occupations, and others find employment in the neighbouring collieries. The church here (or rather chapel) of St. Thomas, is a neat building, in the Gothic style of architecture, with a peal of six bells, erected in 1833, and consecrated in May, 1834; it is situated at the eastern extremity of Hazel Grove; the living is a perpetual curacy. Acreage of township, 1,410.

HIGH LANE is a village, partly in the townships of Norbury and Marple, about five miles s.s.e. from Stockport. An ecclesiastical district was formed from a portion of each of the above named townships, and a small but neat church, called St. Thomas's, was erected and opened in 1860; the patron is the rector of Stockport. There is a National school in the village.

TORKINGTON township adjoins Norbury, and is also in the parish of Stockport, three miles s.e. of that town. Acreage, 820.

POYNTON is a chapelry in the parish of Prestbury, union of Macclesfield, nearly five miles s.s.e. from Stockport. In this chapelry are the extensive collieries of the Right Hon. Augustus Henry Lord Vernon. A railway on a self-acting incline conveys the coal to the Macclesfield branch railway. There is an excellent news room and library established here for the use of the colliers and others in connection with the works; the building was erected in 1854, at a cost of more than £500, the whole of which was most generously contributed by Lord Vernon. The library contains upwards of three thousand volumes. There are also six almshouses, for the use of aged and infirm colliers and their families; they are beautifully built, in the Gothic style, at a cost of upwards of £600, raised by public subscription; each house is endowed with half a crown per week and coals gratis by the above nobleman. A church, dedicated to St. George, was in 1859 erected upon the site of the ancient chapel, at a cost of £3,500. It is in the Gothic style of architecture and is a magnificent building. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the diocese of Chester, and in the gift of Lord Vernon. A free school for children of either sex and one for infants, established and supported by Lord Vernon, are in the chapelry, the acreage of which is 2,490.

WORTH is a township in the parish of Prestbury, union of Macclesfield, and adjoining Poynton, containing 450 acres, many of the inhabitants being employed in the neighbouring collieries.
